

Presentation for Madison Public Library

Our Life and Our Nature: Environmental Consciousness as Reflected in ancient Indian Culture

Abstract

Indian ancestors used to give full respect to the five elements of nature. As given in the four thousand year old spiritual text, Veda, they used to meditate upon: The earth, the intermediate space between the earth and the heaven, the sky, major and minor points of the compass, fire, air, sun, moon, stars, water, herbs, large trees, space and one's soul. But with the change of times our attitudes towards nature has changed as well.

Deep scientific justifications to most of the rituals and incantations given in the Vedas. While we are struggling to attain new ways of tackling the effects of global climate change, the answers might lie in the ancient spiritual texts.

Energy transmission in the cosmos is through waves. Solar energy reaches us through the solar waves. Rhythmic Chanting of Vedic Slokas in sanskrit as well as universal sound of the auspicious Conch Shell, Bell, Drum etc. create waves of different patterns so as to intercept the bad effects / waves in the incoming solar waves blocking their damaging effects, while allowing the good effects of the solar / cosmic waves to reach the earth surface.

Acknowledgement note from Madison Public Library

Programs touches a diverse group in ways that meet their needs & preferences.
Thank you so much for adding to the diversity of offerings.

Best wishes,
Cazuelo Meyer for Friends of the Madison Public Library
(Madison, SA, USA)

15 Oct 2014

Dear Dr & Mrs. Ghosh

Thank you for presenting about the Vedas & our ways of living on the earth. What a rare gift for people in our community to have visiting scholars come share such wonderful knowledge & insight.
While our group was small, I must say that those who came were well served. Everytime we have a presentation, the audience changes, which suggests to me that our variety

RJG